Unless you okay with losing, then keep giving the effort. You put in work. To be successful is never convenient. The things that you have to go through is never convenient. And the reason why some of you can give me 120 on Monday? Because everything look good on Monday. Are you excited? I don't be a millionaire. I don't change the world. I'm going to do this for this person. I'm going to buy this for my mom and my children and put them through school. And you got all these great dreams. And then you get up in the morning and light punch you on your face. As long as it's a perfect day, you operate at excellence. But as soon as the circumstances change, you quit, you give up. Because we all gonna hit that wall. We're all gonna hit opposition. We're all gonna hit adversity. But I think we all know at the core, it's never about what happens to you. It's about how you respond to it. You can control that. In the midst of escalating levels of anxiety, provoked by today's increasing complexity and accelerating change. The thing that any leader or successful person must have is resiliency. The ability to bounce back in the face of every talent, every opposition, every failure, every setback, and the key is never ever ever give up. I need effort from you. I need you to match whatever effort the enemy is putting up. Whoever your enemy is, match the dog on the effort. When you get out there, I need you killed or be killed when you get out there. We ain't playing no more. We ain't taking no prisoners no more. When you get out there, whatever you can get, go get it. Because they don't get it before you get it, and they ain't gonna give it to you. So you go out there and get what's yours. Ain't nobody about to give you your personal freedom. If you're going to get your personal freedom, they ain't giving it away. You gotta go get it. You gotta go earn it. Test days come. They come over and over and over again. The purpose of these days is so that you can prove to yourself, not the rest of the world, that you are the kind of person that possesses the mental fortitude, the grit, the toughness, the perseverance.
